Performance

The Bell Global Equities Fund had a softer month in December falling 1.52% versus the benchmark MSCI World ex Australia Index in AUD which fell 1.71%. 2017 has been a strong year for global equities with the Fund appreciating 13.41% versus the benchmark return of 13.37%.

Market Activity

In local dollar terms, Global equities were generally stronger in December. However a rebound in the Australian dollar reduced the returns of international equities markets in AUD.

Tax reform and a solid economy continued to push the U.S. market to new highs, the potential for a transitional Brexit agreement was a positive relief to the UK market and improving global trade and strong corporate profit growth rallied the Japanese market. Some of the continental European markets were weaker, mainly due to political issues, with the Catalan referendum a drag on the Spanish market, a political stalemate and lack of a coalition resulting in softer performance in Germany and investors looking ahead to next years' Italian elections creating a headwind to that market.

In AUD terms, the only sectors with positive returns were Materials and Energy. Following on from last month, what was most notable was the continued recovery in many Consumer Staples & Consumer Discretionary stocks, which had lagged in prior months.

Performance Attribution

The majority of our positive performance attribution for the month can be attributed to stock selection with most value added in Health Care, Consumer Discretionary and Technology. From a country perspective the two main positives were good stock selection in the U.S. and our underweight to Japan where the Yen weakened against the AUD.

At a stock specific level, our better performers for the month were Lowes, Rightmove, AmerisourceBergen and Tractor Supply, all of which have had good rallies in the last few months. Our laggards were Dun & Bradstreet, Huhtamaki, Oracle and Airbus.

Research Focus

During the last few months we have undertaken extensive research trips through the U.S., Europe and the U.K. For the next few months we will be visiting companies through China, Hong Kong, Japan and also Germany. Our exposure to Asia has been very low for some time. The higher valuation of 'quality' stocks in the region, has resulted in us finding better value in North America and Europe. However, we have an extensive watchlist of companies we are keen to speak to again, as well as looking for potential new names to add to the investible list.

Trade Activity

During December we added two new names which are very different businesses, but both have a common attribute - earnings stability. Diageo, a leading alcoholic beverage company and rail operator, Canadian National Railway.

“We remain constructive on the outlook for equities which is reflected in the characteristics of our portfolio where we focus on high profitability, a conservative level of growth while maintaining the overall P/E of the portfolio similar to the benchmark.”

Canadian National Railway operates over 30,000 kilometres of Class 1 rail across Canada and mid-America, servicing a diverse range of business sectors from industrial and manufactured merchandise to consumer goods to the agriculture, resources and oil & gas industries. CNR has a solid multi-year growth trajectory for revenues and earnings.

From a macro perspective, the strong North American economy underpins the business with the potential for a positive surprise from strengthening industrial output and continued growth in intermodal volumes. CNR is a superior operator with excellent yields and an industry leading operating ratio which we believe is sustainable considering its business mix, continued efficiency gains as it removes network bottlenecks and as rail takes share of total transport which improves pricing thanks to a shortage of trucking capacity. Our expectations for earnings growth are supported by these fundamentals and we think the shares represent good value at these levels.

Finally, in terms of sales, we exited Distribuidora Internacional, the Iberian and South American supermarket operator. Although its valuation is low, quality has deteriorated as management have struggled to grow the business and the company now faces a more difficult outlook.

Portfolio Positioning & Outlook

Throughout the latter half of 2017 we have increasingly spoken about being diligent on valuation. This month is very representative of that as we continue to trim or sell highly valued stocks and rotate that liquidity into businesses with a stable earnings trajectory, which still provide opportunity for upside.

We remain constructive on the outlook for equities which is reflected in the characteristics of our portfolio where we focus on high profitability, a conservative level of growth while maintaining the overall P/E of the portfolio similar to the benchmark.

Our upbeat expectations are supported by the Global economic indicators and consumer data that we observe, which broadly, are very constructive. Most importantly, this positivity is reinforced by commentary from management teams that we continuously meet with during our extensive research trips.

However, we are cognisant of pockets of crowding and high valuations which we believe is most prominent in the U.S. We expect that will result in us continuing to take profit from this market and adding to our exposures throughout Europe and potentially in Asia. We also continue to find good investment opportunities in the small and mid-cap space, where we regularly find bigger disconnects between quality and value.
